Aim of the meeting and preliminary program

The meetings of the IOBC-WPRS Working Group "Induced resistance in plants against insects and diseases" are held every 2 years. The aim of these meetings is to foster exchange between all professionals interested in induced resistance in plants to pests and diseases and in its potential use for integrated pest management.

The meeting in 2013 will cover traditional research themes of the Working Group, including components of stress and defence signalling pathways priming for resistance, their interactions, and other aspects of defences induced by biotic or abiotic agents and beneficials.

Particular emphasis will be placed on practical applications of fundamental research and on the research needs to achieve successful exploitation of induced resistance in the field.

The meeting will start at mid-day on Monday 10 June 2013 and will comprise 6 half days of oral presentations, poster sessions and discussions. The following sessions are planned:

Scientific sessions	Invited speakers
Biotic and abiotic factors affecting induced resistance	Dale Walters, Scottish Agricultural College, Edinburgh, UK
Moving from model plants to crop plants	Dirk Balmer, University of Neuchâtel, Switzerland
How to predict success in the field from success in the lab?	Marie-Noëlle Brisset, INRA – Angers, France
Breeding for inducible resistance	Inger Åhman, Swedish University of Agricultural Sciences, Alnarp Sweden
Induced resistance and field adventures	Sonia Hallier, Vegenov, France
Workshop Perspectives for induced resistance as a tool in IPM	Moderator Dale Walters, Scottish Agricultural College, Edinburgh, UK

Proceedings and call for manuscripts

The proceedings will be published as an IOBC-WPRS Bulletin BEFORE the conference.

Participants who wish to present an oral communication or a poster are invited to submit a manuscript presenting a short contribution of scientific or technical information that is not intended to interfere or compete with publications of data in refereed journals. Manuscripts should be submitted in English. They are limited to 4 pages maximum, including tables, graphs and references.

To avoid unnecessary delays in the production of the Bulletin, authors are kindly requested to respect strictly the IOBC manuscript format. A template, together with specific information for manuscript submission, is available at http://www.iobc-wprs.org/pub/instruction_authors.html

Please submit manuscripts to Dr Philippe Nicot (nicot @avignon.inra.fr) before 1 March 2013.
